JUST OUR NATURE

Beginning on August 24 students flooded the crowded hallways to embark on the 1993-1994 school year. Students were eager to get back into the swing of things and to see their friends. For some, this year would be a new experience; for others, it would be the last year to create those high school memories. No matter what, it was sure that this year Cavemen would encounter new experiences and memories that would last a lifetime.

Students were involved in everything to show exactly who they were. Whether it was performing in plays, competing in sports, working diligently in classes, or simply supporting fellow Cavemen, spirit was shown throughout the year. If MHS students were ever asked why they did the things they did, their response was - It's JUST OUR NATURE! • Suzanne Siatkowski

The Nature of Things

Being a part of extracurricular activities was just The Nature of Things for Cavemen. Despite hectic classes, long homework assignments, and research papers, there were many extracurricular activities that students could become involved in to take their minds off of things. No matter how busy Cavemen were, students always made time to become involved and have fun. Students creatively dressed up for Spirit Week, marched with pride during the Homecoming Parade, and acted their hearts out in various plays. Whatever a Caveman did, spirit and pride were present. Cavemen became involved in additional activities as the year progressed. Homecoming, prom, and graduation were things that took place that created eternal memories. Many Cavemen became involved as much as possible to show just who they were. The pride and spirit that the Cavemen displayed will continue to be The Nature of Things. • Suzanne Siatkowski

Catchin' the Rays During Summertime

the sun

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Spending time in the sun was something that almost every MHS student did every summer vacation. The days were counted down as students eagerly awaited for summer vacation to arrive. Students had vacations planned, jobs to go to, sun to lay out in, and friends to spend time with.

Some MHS students went to far off lands over the summer. Mr. Fraizer again sponsored a trip to Germany, and Mrs. Raffelock took a few students to Japan. No matter what country a MHS student went to, they were always able to experience a new culture and a different way of life.

Other students stayed closer to home over the summer. Some students went to Flordia for a week or two to visit Mickey Mouse; other students took a day to visit a theme park or Lake Michigan simply to have fun. Swimming in a backyard pool or playing sand volleyball were common occurences that many students did over the summer.

While some students were having fun in the sun, others worked all summer. No matter what a Caveman did over the summer, though, he always had fun. As the end of August came, students put away their swimsuits and got ready for school. Although students were sad to see their summer end, they were anxious to get back and see their friends.

Be True to Your School

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Cavemen pride and spirit were shown throughout the entire school year. Two weeks throughout the year were designated times when school spirit and pride was the center of concentration. These two weeks were before the girls' and guys' Homecoming as students got excited to see who would be crowned the Homecoming queen and king. Throughout these times students dressed in many abnormal ways to display their school spirit and to have fun. Whether it was wearing a three foot cowboy hat (like Mindy Pregel) on Hat Day, dressing up as Indiana Jones (like David Bottorff) on Favorite Hollywood Star Day, or simply wearing bell-bottoms and a tied dyed shirt (like everyone) on Hippie Day, students showed that they had spirit. Students were not the only ones who had Cavemen spirit; teachers did also. Many teachers became involved during Spirit Week. Hippie Day was a day that drew the most attention. This was a time when most teachers dug through their closets for clothes they had worn at an earlier age. When students went to classes and saw their teachers in strange attire, they learned that teachers had as much Cavemen pride and spirit as they did. Although there were only two specific weeks for school spirit, it was easy to see it throughout the entire year.

Cavemen Marching in Stride

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Once again an old tradition was brought back to MHS. For the second consecutive year Homcoming brought a new festivity; a Homecoming parade was again added to the agenda for the school year.

Careful planning and creativity were very essential for a successful parade. Many students stayed after school and worked long hours to make floats that symbolized the different classes. Many clubs and groups also marched in the parade carrying banners and mini-floats..

At 2:30 (after the pep assembly) students and faculty flooded Gernhart Street and lined up for the parade through Mishawaka. With the shot of a gun and the beat of the drums, the parade was off to a start.

Cavemen marched down Lincoln Way waving "Hi" to people they saw and threw candy for the little children who were watching in awe. As the parade marched through downtown, Cavemen saw an array of painted windows. Mrs. Ladd had taken several art students at various hours throughout the school day to paint many businesses' windows exhibiting Cavemen pride because MHS is #1.

An Evening to Remember

By Suzanne Siatkowski

There was tension in the night as students, faculty, parents, and friends anxiously awaited to see who would be crowned the 1993-1994 Homecoming queen. Many people filled the stadium on September 24 not only to enjoy another football game but to watch the crowning of the Homecoming queen. This was a night the contestants would never forget.

Friday was the end of a long week, but it was also the beginning of a long day, especially for those on the Homecoming court. Many people came to school dressed up or wearing maroon and white. Later in the day the entire student body and staff went to the east gym to meet the entire Homecoming court and to get everyone fired up for the football game that evening against Adams. Following the pep assembly the crowd flooded the streets to begin the Homecoming parade. After the parade everyone went home to get ready for the football game that evening and the dance that followed.

Finally the anticipated night arrived. The stadium was full of people as the Homecoming court was introduced. Silence fell over the crowd as they waited to see Student Council President Cara Dregits crown the 1993 Homecoming queen... Holly Armstrong.

Running For the Touchdown

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Excitement filled Steele Field on a cold October night when many students, parents, and faculty came to watch the annual Powder Puff game. More than 270 fans sat in the cold, brisk October wind as they cheered on the teams from the various classes.

Seniors killed the sophomores in the first game. In the second game the juniors blew the freshmen away. The two defeated teams then competed in the third game as the sophomores beat the freshmen. In the final game the seniors conquered the juniors in double overtime. Tara Yates (Sr) ran the final touch down and won the game with a score of 14 - 7.

The seniors played their hardest as they competed in Powder Puff in order to uphold senior tradition. Ann Zender (Sr) said, "Seniors took all!"

"Senior pride motivated our team onto victory," stated Rachel Rulli (Sr).

Although Powder Puff remained as a fund-raiser for student council, it was a tradition that students and faculty have looked forward to for over twenty years.

The Crowd Goes Wild

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Motivational Seminars - they were something that sounded dreadful but actually were something that every student looked forward to... pep assemblies. Pep assemblies always fired up the Cavemen by instilling pride, excellence, and spirit.

MHS had various motivational seminars throughout the year to give recognition to various people within the school. The football team was recognized the afternoon of the Homecoming football game against Adams. Susie Hambling, who went down to state for diving, was also congratulated on her success. Students would never forget the 1993 volleyball team who was honored before they went to state; they played long and hard all year. Besides sporting events, many clubs and groups were given notice, too. The exchange students and all the various clubs who marched in the parade were also recognized.

Pep assemblies were not only to commemorate different people, but they also allowed the students to have fun. Nobody would ever forget when Barney visited MHS and sang his version of various songs. Most of all, students would remember when an Elvis impersonator visited MHS. As Rob Hunter walked onto the gym floor, the crowd went wild; his bodyguards had to fight some of the poms off. Whether it was Mr. Chamberlin doing one of his impressions or Opera Man singing, school spirit and pride were everywhere because the students were proud to be called Cavemen.

I Found a Golden Ticket

By Suzanne Siatkowski

With adrenalin running and their hearts beating quickly, the MHS drama department rushed around backstage getting ready. They were putting the finishing touches on their make-up and costumes before going on stage. It was the opening night of Charlie and the Chocolate Factory. The play was performed on October 7 & 9 at 7:30pm in the auditorium. The annual children's play cost $2.00 for students and $4.00 for adults. The play began as Brandy Hayne (Jr) introduced the five lucky people who found a golden ticket in their Willie Wonka candy. Augustus Gloop, Ken Groen (Jr); Veruca Salt, Marka Kubsch (So); Violet Beauregarde, Holly DeCola (So); Mike Teavee, Zac Emmons (So); and Charlie Bucket, Jeff Sabbe (Sr) were the five lucky winners. Willie Wonka, Neil Scheibelhut (Sr), took the winners through the factory showing them his secret inventions. All of the winners indulged themselves in some way within the factory. Violet Beauregarde, Holly DeCola (So), stole a piece of gum that tasted like a full course dinner, filled up with blueberry juice, and was rolled away by the Oompa-Loompas. Charke Bucket, Jeff Sabbe (Sr), was the only one who did not disobey the rules. As a result, Willie Wonka awarded him the factory and all the secrets that went with it.

Singing Many Tunes

By Suzanne Siatkowski

This year the MHS drama department tried something different. On November 18, 19, and 20 the MHS students performed MHS Revue '93. A revue is a dramatic production consisting of various skits from different plays.

Mrs. Jaggerman liked the idea of doing a revue because it gave "a lot of people a chance to have a solo or a part that they would not have gotten a chance to do in a regular play."

The revue began with seniors Jeff Sabbe and Sabrina Ellenberger off stage talking about how disappointed they were because it was their last year in high school. They would have only one more chance to perform in a spring musical at MHS, but what about all the other great musicals? MHS Revue '93 allowed the drama department to fulfill that wish. The actors performed various scenes from different plays such as: Bye Bye Birdie, Kiss Me, Kate, Gentlemen Prefer Blonds, Finian's Rainbow, Porgy and Bess, Paint Your Wagon, Most Happy Fella, and Grease.

Neil Scheibelhut (Sr) really enjoyed acting in the various plays at MHS. He said, "When I got on stage, in front of a lot of people, it gave me a feeling of accomplishment. I realized that I could do something that others could not."

Winter Madness

By Suzanne Siatkowski

As the winter break approached, students and faculty got into the holiday spirit. Despite the overload of homework before vacation, students kept their spirits high and kept busy during the cold weather.

Once again Mr. Manuszak organized the canned food drive. This year many students became involved and helped over 250 families in this area; $6457.24 was raised to purchase perishable goods and gift certificates. Mr. Manuszak greatly appreciated all the generosity of the students, faculty, and community as they took time out of their schedule to make someone's winter brighter.

Many other activities took place before students left for their winter vacation. The MHS A'Capella Choir performed their annual performance of Vespers and went caroling. The sounds of the holidays filled the halls on the last day of school before vacation.

Some students began their vacation by attending the Mistletoe, a semi-formal dance, on the evening of December 17. This was a night for many students to get dressed up and dance the night away.

Despite the cold temperatures and the hectic activities during the season, students and faculty kept smiling and had fun during all of the winter madness.

And the home of the brave. The crowd let out a load cheer as Sabrina Ellenberger (Sr) sang the Star Spangled Banner. The announcer came over the intercom announcing the 1993-1994 Guys' Homecoming Court and their escorts.

Once again, Guys' Homecoming brought a large crowd to the basketball game. This year the Cavemen battled the Riley Wildcats. Students filled the stands to not only see the Cavemen play another exciting basketball game, but also to see which of their fellow classmates would be crowned king.

Jason Metcalfe gave two thumbs up as he sat smiling in front of the student body after being crowned king; this was a moment Metcalfe would never forget. Metcalfe said, "My legs were shaking and I thought I would start to dance," as he anxiously awaited the crowning during half-time.

Metcalfe was overwhelmed by the great support of his big group of friends. His friends went "nuts" as Student Council President Cara Dregits crowned Metcalfe king; they displayed their overwhelming support for Jason by singing "Minnie the Moocher." Metcalfe wanted to thank everyone who voted for him and everyone who didn't vote for him. Metcalfe also wanted to congratulate Brad Addison (Jr) for finally getting his tie tied.

A Whole New World

By Suzanne Siatkowski

Sit back and close your eyes as we visit a whole new world. Let your imagination take you away to a magical place called Narnia - a place that is full of talking animals, castles, and new adventures. The MHS drama department took us there on March 17, 18, and 19 when they performed C.S. Lewis' The Lion, The Witch, and The Wardrobe.

The curtain opened as four children Lucy, Emily

Trimboli (Fr); Edmund, Jeremy Fisher (Fr); Susan, Clare Kemble (Jr); and Peter, Matt Houghton (Fr) went to their uncle's cottage for the summer. While there the children came across an old wardrobe. The children entered the wardrobe in hope of embarking on a new adventure in Narnia. The children encountered the White Witch, Sabrina Ellenberger (Sr), who had a negative attitude against everything. Aslan, Eric DeCraene ('90), gave the children the strength, courage, and confidence to overcome the evil witch. The children then become the rulers of Narnia before returning home and ending their adventure.

Extra money was spent on the costumes and make-up for the play. This allowed the students to get into their character more, and it also added to the plot of the play. Pamm Kraegel (Sr) stated, "Everyone was so caught up in the fun of creating a character...it really showed in our performances."

Spike That Ball

Co-ed intramural volleyball hit the courts this spring. Beginning on February 2nd students and faculty began competing for the championship. Students, teachers, and various faculty members filled the west gymnasium every Wednesday night.

This year eleven teams competed for the championship. Each team could have up to ten players, and, in order to compete, they had to pay a $50 team fee.

This year the team Why Play? You Know We're Gonna Win won the championship. Their name summed up the results of the tournament. The team consisted of seven students, three of whom were on the MHS volleyball team that went down to state.

There were many interesting moments throughout the season. Kelly Beaty cherished the time spent "playing with my senior friends, and winning a match that we thought we had no chance at." Mrs. Hambling enjoyed "watching

Mr. Golba dive after the ball." She will never forget Mr. Tobolski, "He had a different finger bandaged after every game!"

The time spent playing volleyball created many everlasting memories. Many students played because they liked hanging out with their friends. Miss Horvath, on the other hand, played "because Mr. Trimboli was on the team and I needed to kiss-up to him. After all, I am only a first year teacher!"

Wonderful Tonight

By Suzanne Siatkowski

With sweaty palms and a corsage in hand, he pulled up in front of her house in a clean car. This was the beginning of a special evening that every couple would remember.

To help remember that special evening, many couples gathered together in front of houses or at the Japanese Garden to take those never ending pictures. Dinner then followed at one of the many local restaurants such as the Emporium or Tippicanoe. Students finally began to fill Union Station at 8pm to dance the night away.

Prom '94 was held on Friday, May 27th. When students entered Union Station, Mr. Chamberlin announced every couple's presence. Students walked across a bridge into an evening of excitement. Multi-colored balloons and streamers filled the room to represent the theme of Wonderful Tonight. A variety of songs was played, ranging from country, oldies, and modern tunes throughout the night.

Whether it was with a friend or a long time boyfriend/girlfriend, students danced, laughed, and enjoyed themselves until midnight.

As the clock struck twelve, students parted and went their separate directions. One thing remained, however, the memories that were created with friends at Prom '94 would always hold a special place in their hearts.

We're Out of Here

By Suzanne Siatkowski

With pride and enthusiasm the class of 1994 marched onto Steele Field on a sunny, windy day. June 5, 1994, was the day that many students, waiting to embark on their future, said good-bye to their old friends.

The commemorative day's festivities began at 1pm in the school auditorium. Several students organized a Baccalaureate service to recognize the importance of God in each one of their lives. Students sang and read poems that symbolized the unity and friendships of the class of '94. Students sat and reminisced about the fun times throughout high school during a slideshow. The service concluded with all of the seniors gathering on stage to sing Lean on Me.

Following the Baccalaureate was the 117th annual Commencement exercises. Students anxiously waited to receive their diplomas as they listened to Co-Salutatorians Laura Hildreth and Carrie Stone, Co-Valedictorians David Bottorff and Richard Shoesmith, and FBI Agent Rick Miller speak inspiring words to the senior class.

Students flooded the cafeteria to receive their actual diplomas and to say good-bye to their friends after the ceremony. Pictures were taken so that faces and smiles would always be remembered. The words of the senior class motto remained true as they said farewell: "We came together as strangers, but we leave as eternal friends."

ARIES (March 21-April 19) You're enthusiastic, passionate and willing to try new things. You're happiest starting plans and plunging into your work. A total romantic, you believe in love at first sight. You'd do anything for that special person in your life--that's why you're so appealing!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You're a mix of determination, stubbornness, sensitivity and compassion. In your friendships, you're the one who gives advice and makes everyone happy. When you're in love, you are totally committed, passionate, and caring.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) You're spontaneous, inquisitive and talented. You get involved with many projects, and you make friends easily. Geminis always rule the social scene. You intrigue the opposite sex because you're versatile and romantic yet independent and smart.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're hardworking and caring, and you would do anything for your friends. You like to nurture and be nurtured. Love, however, is the most important thing on earth to you. When you find the right person, you're totally devoted. You possess incredible intuition and lots of energy.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) You've got brains, talent and charm. You're a natural leader who has an instinct for attracting attention. And you never lack for admirers - your self-assurance is appealing to others. You're also incredibly giving of your heart, especially with advice and support.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) You're cool, detached and discriminating, especially when it comes to friends and romantic partners. But underneath your reserved inside lies a warm and sensitive heart. You're loyal and a hard worker with a splendid eye for adding that finishing touch.

FOR WHAT IN YOUR LIFE DO YOU FEEL MOST GRATEFUL FOR?

Life. I'm just happy to be around. Bob O'Hara (So)

My family. Most of my friends don't have a "family" like mine; they just have parents and siblings. Denys Humes (Jr)

ur Involvement

Learning, gaining knowledge, and developing a clearer understanding of our world was the backbone of our education. These things were done to broaden our horizons throughout high school.

School was the centralized place of education. Not only did we go to classes to learn, but the activities that students participated in helped in the learning process.

Various clubs and organizations brought many students together to help create new friends and a more unified school. Clubs allowed students to have fun while learning. They gave students a different way to look at a subject matter.

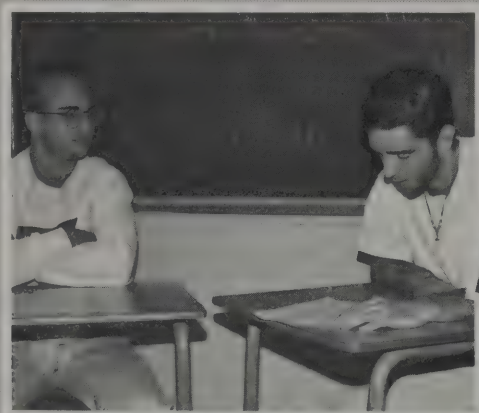

Some students opted to become involved in almost every club possible; other students could not participate in clubs as much because of sports or jobs outside of school. No matter what, students were at school actively participating in classes. Our involvement, either during classes or after school, showed how proud we were to be called Mishawaka Cavemen. • Suzanne Siatkowski

Expectations

In the past few years employers started to expect more from their employees. This forced the applicants to be more prepared during and after high school.

Employees had to know more than basic skills. In addition to reading, writing, speaking, listening, and workplace skills, employees should have good people skills, good grammar, good eye contact, be mannerly and courteous, know how to prevent conflicts, show respect for others and themselves, be honest, and know how to give and receive constructive criticism. Employers were coming to expect these things without exception. If an employee didn't possess these skills, he would be the first to be let go from a job, and he may never know why.

Everything in the work world mattered. The attendance policy at the high school was lenient compared to the expectations that employers enforced; some jobs only allowed their workers to have one unexcused absence and six sick days. At a job, things had to be perfect. Throughout high school students could have typos on papers and still receive a good grade on their paper; at a job, however, employers expected typed documents to be perfect.

These expectations caused students and teachers to work harder to be prepared for an ever-changing workplace. • Brooke Chodzinski

Contemplation

Like it or not, problem solving was required inside of school and outside in the real world. Problem solving was a process that students went through several times each day. Many problems were solved each day by using critical thinking. Whether it was brainstorming, doing research, making an outline, or simply asking questions, problems were solved by going through a step-by-step process. Without critical thinking, people simply would not be able to survive. Heidi Thogerson said, "I would not be able to go through a day without it." How many people plan out what they're going to do for the week, or what they're going to wear for the day? Students may not have realized it, but these were examples of how critical thinking was used. Many students utilized to-do lists or goal planning sheets to assist them in their daily activities and life long goals. • Jessica Signorino

Discussion

Whether students were watching Channel 1, reviewing current events with a social studies teacher, or discussing present day topics with friends, the world around us and the events taking place had a great impact on how we lived our lives each day. As different topics arose in the media, so did our interests in what was happening. From the big earthquake in California, to the first election in South Africa, to the caning of an American in Singapore, all of these events raised the interests of many students this year. Until one began talking about certain topics, many people did not realize how much these events effected our everyday lives. Often heated details could be heard concerning an event that was taking place clear on the other side of the world.

"Studying current events kept us up to date on what was happening and gave us a better understanding of the world around us," claimed senior Amy Mestach. By studying current events we became aware of the many different cultures in our world and it helped us understand those societies and their beliefs. • Angie Gianesi

Choices

Many changes occurred around the world this past year. Civilizations, cultures, and governments changed in many countries. And, because of those changes, which rocketed them into the nightly and Channel 1 news, the American people and students learned about other educational systems and the value placed upon them by different cultures.

For example a Russian student was required to attend school for at least ten years. Those graduates who received high marks were then freed from the required military service so they could continue their education. Students had only one opportunity to become more knowledgeable. If they failed, they were unable to go back to school and try again. Although this system was strict, nearly all its people could read and write.

In Japan nine years of education was required. Almost all Japanese students completed the education requirements. After nine years students were required to take an entrance examination to be admitted to the three years of senior high school. Almost all Japanese people fifteen or older could read and write.

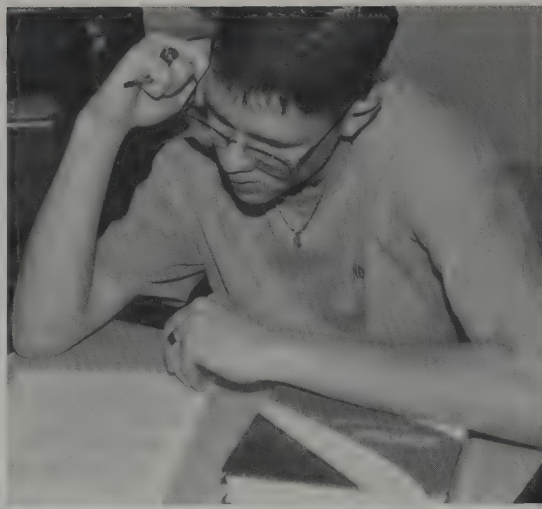

In the United States educational requirements were different for every state. The age requirements floated loosely from the age of thirteen to the age of seventeen. If a student failed a grade, he was still able to re-enter school to try again. If he dropped out, he always had the option to return to school and receive a diploma at any age. Although a great percentage of Americans were able to read and write, the percentage was not as great as that of Russia and Japan. The U.S., however, offered the greatest value, the value of choice, the value of freedom. Students at any age, from any background, were able to continue their education at any time. • Donnie Zimmerman

Deception

In our everyday lives, no matter what we did, there were certain ethics that we lived and abided by. Whether we were working at a business or attending school, we were taught to follow these rules.

As a young child, we were taught the difference between right and wrong by our parents, relatives, and teachers. Hopefully as we grew and matured, our knowledge and ethics did also.

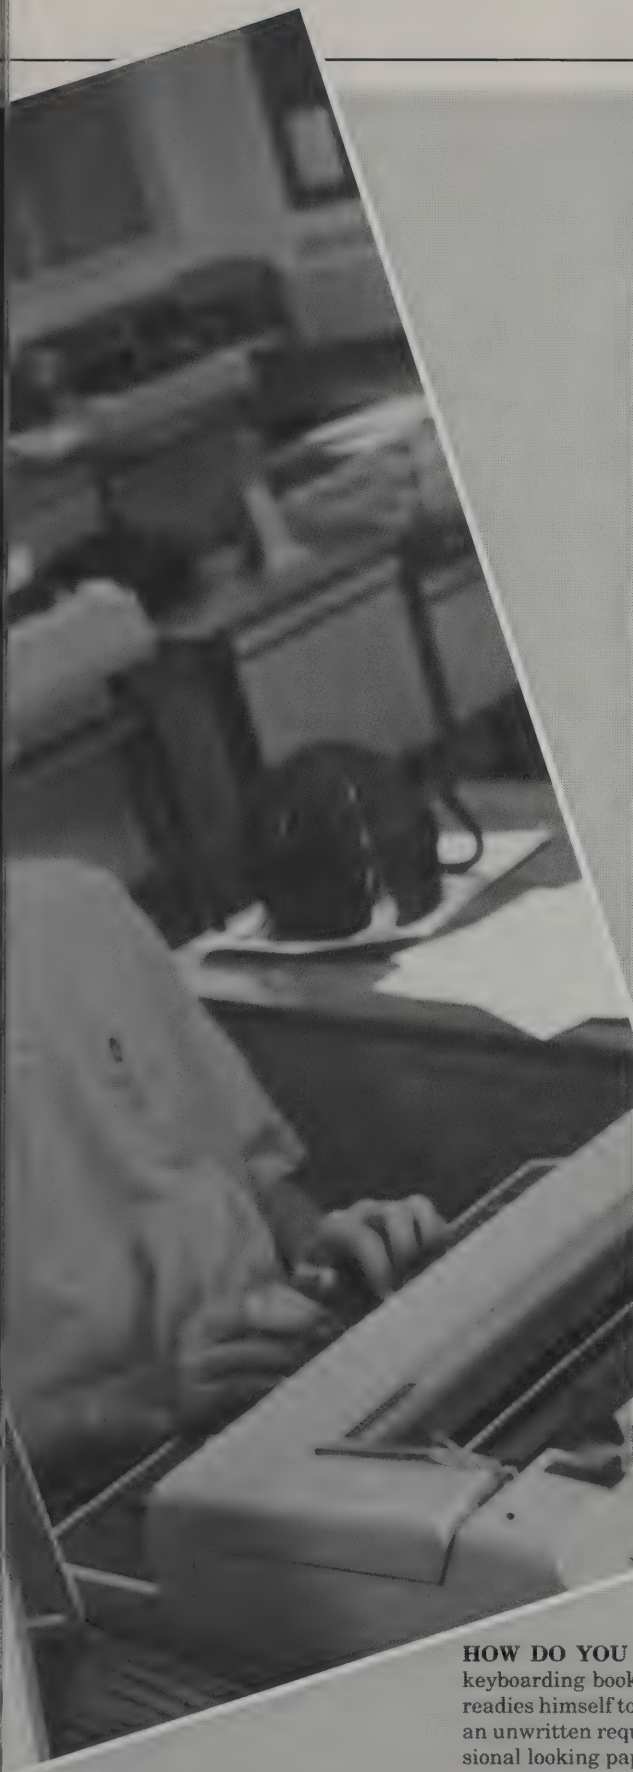

One of the main ethics we were taught throughout our schooling was how cheating was wrong. Not only were those who cheated doing something wrong, but what about those that witnessed cheating around them? Could one turn someone in if he saw them cheating? What if it was a good friend? If one answered yes to both of these questions, then one has been taught some very good ethics. When someone cheats, he has not only hurt himself, but also everyone in the class, especially if the teacher graded on a curve. How would one feel if one missed getting an A only because someone who had cheated messed up the grading curve? Jessica Signorino (Sr) said, "It made me very upset when I knew that someone cheated, and my grade was lowered because of it."

The ethics that were learned in school gave students a good foundation for ethical problems that were surely to occur on down the road. By practicing them now, the right answers would come more easily in the future. That was why it was so important that students practiced these ethics so that they would come naturally later on in our life. • Angie Gianesi

Conscientious

Over the years, the interest in individual fitness and overall health increased significantly. We were headed towards a smoke-free environment and consumed less fat; but most important, we were interested in protecting ourselves. People were more conscious about their weight and more careful about their health. They were concerned about how their skin looked and felt. At the beach more people used sunblock instead of sun-oil. At the supermarket people looked at labels more. All food products were required to indicate percentages of nutrition content, especially fat. Movie popcorn was attacked on fat content. It was reported that the fat in one bag of movie popcorn was equal to the fat in a bacon and egg breakfast, a Big Mac and fries for lunch, and a steak for dinner. Because of this, society as a whole had become more aware of what they were putting into their bodies. • Jessica Signorino

Appreciation

Traditionally, art collectors were the only people who truly appreciated art. However, the face of art changed. The appreciation of art was no longer just for art collectors. More and more people became interested in different kinds of art. From classical Renaissance paintings to new-age sculpting and design, people became more interested in the art that surrounded them every day.

More and more people began taking art classes, whether it was in high school or outside of school. Museum exhibits, art auctions, and sales were not only for prospective buyers, but they were also for the interested general public.

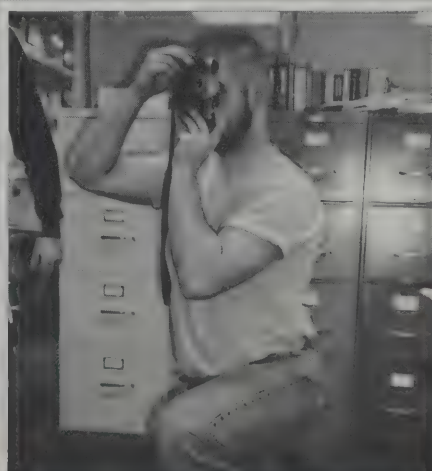

Over the past decade, abstract art has gained greater appreciation. Because of the many different interpretations of abstract design, it has been appealing to more people than traditional art forms.

The new age of art appreciation has caused people to open their eyes and see the world of art and photography with an open mind and a new awareness.

Experience

High school didn't have to be contained in a classroom. Learning different skills went beyond the walls. Many classes at MHS taught students without books and lectures; students were given practical hands on training. Students knew the skill and technical aspect, and this gave them a chance to apply their knowledge in the actual workworld. Some students job shadowed at the hospital, taught elementary students through Project Teach, built a house through BTH, made model homes in IA, or helped out on election day at the polls. These experiences helped the students deal directly with the public instead of learning the theory in the classroom. Students used listening and communications skills to solve problems and to obtain more information to do a better job. Because of these classes, students had the experience to successfully enter the work force. • Donnie Zimmerman

Organization

Everyone wanted to have a variety of electives, but fitting them all into perfectly organized schedules was sometimes difficult because many students ran into conflicts. Classes such as band, orchestra, mass media, publications and most honors classes were only offered one hour a day. In addition, some students had to fit their required courses into half a day while they received credits through the Elkhart Career Center or Co-op programs. The counselors and students worked together to organize their time and interests in the most beneficial way.

Some students used their extra choice to catch up on homework in study hall, or volunteered their services, such as running passes, answering phones in various offices, or shelving books in the library. • Mindy Pregel

Expressions

Through dancing, people were able to express their inner selves. Emotions were shown through the art of dance without even the slightest word. A lot could be said without words. By watching people's facial expressions and actions, it could be seen if they were happy or sad, frustrated or excited. While watching the pom pon squad and rhythm express groups during their performances, it was easy to see that they enjoyed what they were doing. Bright eyes and smiles spread all across the dance floor. The expressions in part came from a cheering crowd. It gave them a feeling as if they were appreciated. Ann Zender (Sr), who had the experience of being in both groups, said, "Through being on both poms and rhythm express, I learned that dance can come from many different aspects. Poms was more upbeat with today's songs, whereas, rhythm express was more conservative." Whether it be rap, oldies, classical, house, or even country, dance gave everyone a chance to express their feelings without words. Being in either of these groups gave each individual a sense of belonging. Everyone liked to watch them perform. Without pom pons and rhythm express, MHS wouldn't be the same. • Jessica Signorino

QUICK EXPLANATION Mr. Frazier takes time out of class to explain to Lee Gill (Jr) the subjunctive form of words. Mr. Frazier liked to have his students mimic him so that they would learn the German language better. Photo by Toby Deal.

Communication

Whether it was through body language or through words, communication was an essential part of everyday life both in and out of school.

Finding just the right words to express how one felt with the right descriptive word was important in relationships, creating a mood for a composition, and in understanding other cultures.

In addition, people communicated for entertainment in various plays, and role played to place themselves in other people's shoes to express how they felt and understand others.

Communicating with different languages and cultures was the experience for the foreign exchange students. They not only had to comprehend the English language, but they also had to understand the slang of each different culture. After living in the United States, the foreign exchange students not only understood a new language, but they also learned a new culture and a new way of life.

Communicating with authoritative people helped students to mature and become more responsible. Students had to communicate with the deans to explain situations clearly, to talk with their parents to possibly gain something that they wanted, and to learn how to solve conflicts, both socially and in their part-time jobs.

No matter what students did, they needed communication as a way to understand other people, cultures, and beliefs. This helped students to mature and become more knowledgeable about the world around them. • Angie Giansesi

Transition

This year could have been called the age of the electronics. Everywhere one looked computers were being used in the home or office. Instead of writing letters, people used a word processor. Teachers used computers to write out worksheets and make homework assignments. They weren't just used for work. One could make banners, cards, or play different games.

Students in publications used PageMaker. Many said that using a computer made writing a paper easier. They could spell-check and edit their paper faster which improved their grades.

Students must be prepared for the changes in the future. Programs and other software applications have made tasks easier and less time consuming. For some people it was hard to change from using a pen to using a keyboard. For others it was a welcome change. • Katie Robinson

Competition

Although success sometimes was not easily achieved, many students conquered the obstacles in their way to being successful. Whether it was in a sport or in the classroom, students practiced their individual skills and gave it their best attempt when competition time came around. Students competed against each other in science fairs, study games, and academic competitions. Students competed against themselves when taking tests, learning new skills, and being creative. Was enough learned to have a conversation in a different language, get an article printed in the Alltold, or have a model home selected to be displayed in front of the office? How many rough drafts had to be made before that paper was finished in final form? Students enjoyed the challenges of these projects and competitions, and many hours of practice were put into them. Focusing attention on an assignment was rewarding and gave students a sense of accomplishment and self-esteem. It was all about competition. That "A" was in reach with practice, concentration, and determination. • Donnie Zimmerman

Separation

Due to the 1992 Supreme Court ruling, schools could not enforce religious beliefs. Because of this, however, many students still felt that religion was important and should be practiced, if chosen to do so, by each individual.

Even though the school could not sponsor activities that practiced religion, it was, however, allowed to be taught. Mr. Bottorff taught a world's religions class to inform students of the various religions that were practiced. Several students took a field trip and visited various churches to see first hand the different beliefs.

Many students felt that God was important, and therefore organized various activities that any student could participate in. Campus Life leader Tom Gabler led weekly meetings at students' homes and discussed various important topics. Several students gathered together throughout the year to pray for our school. Also, many seniors planned and organized an optional Baccalaureate service to thank God for their friendships and for helping them throughout high school.

Although church and state were ruled to be separate, many MHS students believed God was important in their daily lives, and therefore included Him. • Brooke Chodzinski

It comes naturally

No matter where you went, you couldn't miss it. It was in the smiles of the victorious faces and in the tears of the sad eyes. It was the same thing that brought teams together and made everybody champions. It was the Caveman pride that shone through in every athlete.

Even before the academic year started, the dedicated athletes were working hard to prepare for their up-coming season. Whether they were running many miles a day, lifting weights, or doing practice drills, each athlete was improving so that he or she could shine during competition, and show the other schools what Mishawaka sports were all about.

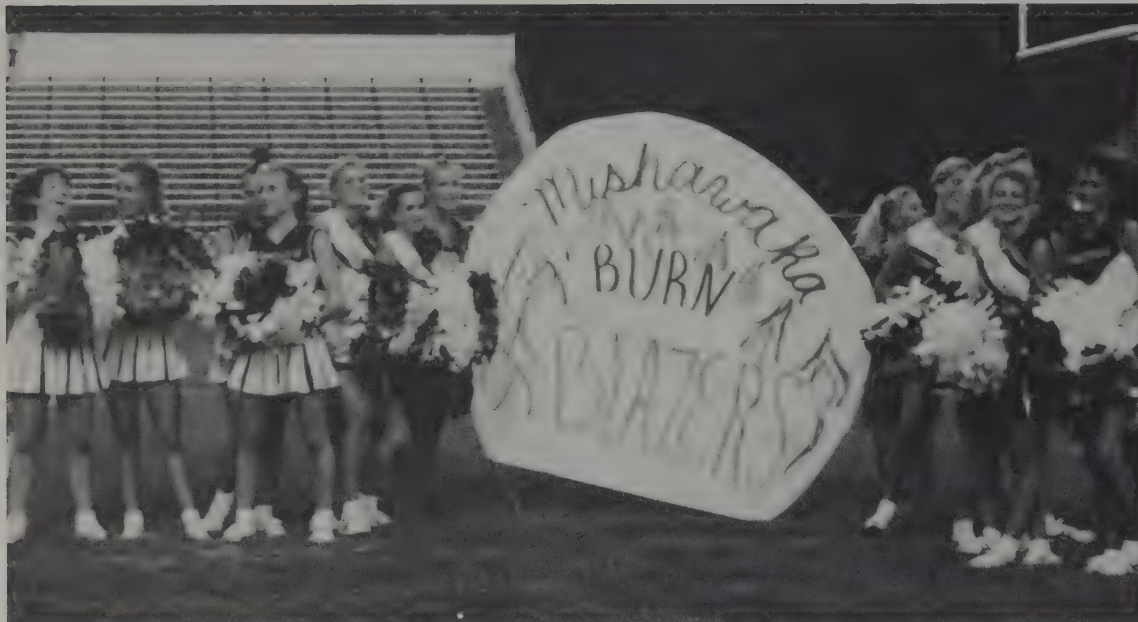

Throughout the overwhelming victories and the heart-breaking losses, Cavemen athletes held their heads high and never looked down. Whether it was the spine-tingling victory over 5th ranked LaPorte in football, or the heart felt loss to Muncie Burris in volleyball, Cavemen athletes were good sports. When asked why, the common response was, "It comes naturally." •Melissa Callaway

H igh spirits

By Melissa Callaway

After all the stress and tension of tryouts was over and the new cheerleading squad for the 1993 - 1994 school was chosen, there was a lot of work to be done to prepare for the upcoming football season. They needed new and exciting ways to get the crowd involved in the game and cheers. Their first step toward the new season was going to cheerleading camp.

Cheerleading camp was the time when the girls came together and worked toward making the squad better than ever. At camp they learned new cheers, chants, dances, and ways to get the crowd involved. Jenni Lema (Fr) said that she "liked how close you got to your squad. The whole day was just a blast."

After camp was done, the squad worked the rest of the summer practicing what they learned and getting ready for football season. Crowd involvement during football season could be challenging for cheerleaders because of the size of the crowds. But the cheerleaders at Mishawaka had no problem with getting the crowd involved at football games. In fact, the crowd often started cheers. Regina

Molnar (Sr) said that she liked football season better than basketball "because there was a lot more crowd involvement and spirit."

Over-all the cheerleaders thought their seasons went well. Whether it was the improved crowd involvement, the squad being closer than ever, or the new guy cheerleaders, they were sure to have fun doing what they loved. If anyone asked any of the girls why they tried out for cheerleading, he would find out the girls loved how they could make a difference in the spirit of a team.

Stepping up

By Melissa Callaway

Upperclassmen on any team are expected to be leaders and good role models for the younger players to follow. The upperclassmen on this year's varsity football were just that. The older players knew what had to be done to bring the team together, and they did it. Bill Buraczewski (Sr) said, "With so many young people playing, the seniors had to act more like coaches than players."

The older players also set goals for themselves that they strived to meet throughout the season. Chad Cave (Sr) said that his goals were to "do the best of my ability and give the team a winning season."

Chad Thomas (Sr) said that his one main goal was to make all-conference as wide receiver.

When the underclassmen started following the examples of the older players, the level of play stepped up. The younger players started playing with their hearts along with their heads, and the whole team came together as one. Chris Snyder (Jr) said that he "liked it when the team started playing with emotion."

If football games were determined by ability and desire, the varsity team would have won every game. Even though the team didn't always come out the victor, there was no denying that the individual players were always champions.

The players set goals for themselves when it came to their individual stats, too. Toby Deal (Sr) said that his goal for passing "was to get over 1000 yards." He not only reached that goal but surpassed it by throwing for 1234 yards.

Throughout the season the team worked on one common goal - improvement. When the team reached that goal, the players realized that all of their hard work paid off.

W orking together

By Melissa Callaway

As the freshmen football team walked onto the field for their last game of the season against Elkhart Memorial, they had no idea it would go the way it did. The game was a constant battle back and forth. The Cavemen scored first on a ten yard run by Andy Burks (Fr). Immediately following, Memorial ran back the kickoff tying the score at 6. After that, neither team scored until the second overtime.

Both teams seemed very tired, but neither team was ready to give up. Then out of nowhere Mishawaka got their second wind that helped them win the game. It was the third down; Jason Cullum (Fr) ran the ball nine yards setting up the next play on the one yard line. The next play was a hand-off to Brett Callaway (Fr). He rushed up the center to score the winning touchdown.

Even though the last game of the freshmen season was surprising, the season as a whole was not. The freshmen team knew they would have a successful season. When asked why he knew they would be successful, Chad Buras (Fr) said, "because we practiced hard and worked hard during the games."

Like the freshmen team, the junior varsity team worked hard, too. Most of the players started training before the season officially started. Everyday they were in the weight room lifting and building their strength for the season to come. By doing this, Nathan Cockey (Jr) learned "that you have to work out in the off-season to be good."

Both the freshmen and junior varsity seasons were successful because each player learned something that he would carry with him the rest of his life.

F rom the heart

By Melissa Callaway

It was not unusual to find a volleyball team that met the goals they set at the beginning of the season. However, it was hard to find a team that not only met the goals they set, but pushed way past them with the heart and desire that made winners into champions. The varsity volleyball team this year was one of those hard-to-find teams.

Ever since the end of the 1992 season the one common goal for all of the players was to make it to state again for the 8th year in a row. They started working toward that goal at the end of the season last year. Most of the girls pushed themselves to the limit either by running, lifting weights, or playing off-season volleyball. Whatever they did, they made sure that they gave 110%.

Along with team goals the players set individual goals for themselves that they strived to meet. Randa Shields (Sr) said that her goals were "to be 1st team all-state, and a friend to everyone on the team."

Throughout the season many lessons were learned, whether it be about volleyball or life. "I learned how to truly work hard and never give up on my teammates or myself," said Sara Unrue (Sr).

Even though the team was always serious on the floor, it didn't mean that they didn't have fun. The girls often did silly things before games to lessen the pressure of the upcoming game, and it was hardly ever the same thing. Whether they laid in a line and rolled over each other, grabbed their baggy shorts in a way to make everyone laugh, or gave each other piggy back rides around the court, they made sure they had fun.

By watching these girls play, one could tell that their love and desire for the game came from the heart.

New beginnings

By Melissa Callaway

When a team comes together for the first time, it is always difficult to get organized. To play effectively the team members need to know each other's abilities and how they think on the court. This was one of the things that the freshmen and junior varsity volleyball teams learned this year.

Lee Gill (Jr) said that she learned "how to work with other people as a team, not as individuals." Gill was not the only one who thought this; many of her teammates believed the same thing. They said that working together on and off the court really helped the team come together.

Like the junior varsity team, the freshmen team also learned how to work together toward their goal of winning. "I learned that you really had to work your hardest in practice to pay off in the game. Everyone had to practice and play their hardest to make it work in the game," said Keilah Ehrman (Fr).

The players on the freshmen and junior varsity teams often set goals that would help them improve their play in hope of making varsity the next year. Karey Nawrot (Jr) said that her individual goals were "to be a leader, help other members of the team, and play the best I could."

No matter what, the girls always gave it their best. They pushed themselves to improve so that they would be the best volleyball players and friends that they could be.

The friends that they made would last throughout their high school career and after. Improved skills and abilities along with new friendships were all part of the freshmen and junior varsity's new beginnings.

When these people tried out for cross country, they knew exactly what they were headed for. They worked hard all season and were thankful in the end. "Our season went so well because everyone came into the season with great attitudes and were ready to give it their all," said Pamm Kraegal (Sr).

The cross country team was not made up of individual runners; it was made of team members who came together as friends and worked with each other to better the team. Each member gave everything they had all of the time. "I made a lot of good friends that I'll never forget," commented John Warmoth (Fr).

Everyone was important when it came to cross country. No matter who you were, you still had to give it your all. Leslie Stevenson (Jr) learned that "even though you may not have been one of the top runners, you were still important to the team."

"I learned that hard work paid off, and in order to achieve goals you had to work hard," stated Aaron Hoof (Jr). Everyone on the team set individual goals for themselves throughout the season. Pamm Kraegal's (Sr) goals were to letter again, to make top seven majority, and to make top five. John Warmoth (Fr) also wanted to letter, but he also wanted to make first or second team NIC.

In the end, everyone knew that their hard work paid off. Whether it was reaching their goals, making new friends, or breaking their own personal best by finishing the 5000m (boys') or 4000m (girls') course in a better time than before, everyone had fun. They realized that hard work had its rewards, and they weren't just running around in circles.

Dive on in

By Becky Baer & Melissa Callaway

How does diving into 70 degree water at six o'clock in the morning sound? Not very good? Well, this was what the girls' and guys' swim teams had to do all season. They had to get up about 5:30 a.m. to get ready for school and be at practice and in the pool by six.

Maturity and experience came gradually for these two young teams. With hard losses early in the season the teams realized they had to pull together and work toward one common goal - improvement. The captains on both the girls' and guys' teams helped pull them together by showing positive attitudes at practice and at meets. Eventually the younger swimmers took the captains' lead and started believing in themselves, the team, and their individual abilities.

The dedication put into the season by all of the swimmers paid off at sectionals. Each swimmer gave all he or she had for what was the last meet of the season. The only members who went on in the tournament were one boy's relay team, one girl's swimmer, and one girl's diver. Jamie Meisenhelder (Fr) placed third in the 100 breaststroke, and in the diving event Susie Hambling (So) added a sectional championship to her undefeated season. Susie's first place performance earned her a second trip to Indianapolis to compete in the state finals. Susie finished her season with a twenty-first place in state.

In the end, everything came more easily for the teams. A steady improvement was seen in all the swimmers' efforts. Being a member on one of the Cavemen swim teams gave everyone experience in the pool and taught them a valuable lesson. They learned that if they set their minds on something and worked as hard as they could, they would eventually become the best they could be.

E ndurance

By Melissa Callaway

The player gracefully raised the racket and ball preparing to serve and waited for the referee to blow the whistle. He tossed the ball into air and with a swift swing put it in play. The opponent returned the ball and the Caveman player hit it back over the net. The ball flew back and forth throughout the entire match. Neither player willing to give up, the match decidedly came down to who had the most endurance - the Caveman player.

Because the girls' and boys' tennis teams were young in age and experience, they did not have the winning season they had hoped for. Throughout the season the coaches of both teams worked with the players to improve the natural ability they did have. The natural ability the players possessed often played a key roll in the matches. Brandon Chizum (Jr) said, "Our team as a whole had a lot of athleticism which helped us pull off some wins that we needed to get."

Both Cavemen teams knew that the challenges that they were going to have to face were going to be great. By taking on the challenges of the stronger teams, each Caveman player found out what they could and couldn't do. They then used that knowledge to improve their skills and abilities for the matches to come.

Over-all each player improved their individual skills as well as their understanding of the game. Judging by the amount of experience both teams gained, next season should be a great one.

Down to the wire

By Melissa Callaway

Do you remember what happened December 22, 1993? It hasn't happened since 1989 when the Cavemen beat Elkhart Central with a score of 61-59. If you still don't know, here is a reminder. It was the day that the varsity boys' basketball team won the Elkhart Holiday Tournament with a 54-44 victory over our cross town rival - the Penn Kingsmen. The Cavemen team upset the Kingsmen for what would be the first time Mishawaka beat Penn this year.

The next time the two teams met was February 18, 1994 in the NIC game. Before the game even started, the energy levels coming from the opposing crowds were tremendous. Everyone could see the signs hanging all around the Kingsmen's gym that said things like, 'Welcome to our palace' or 'Revenge is sweet,' but all the Cavemen team saw was another victory, and that is exactly what they got.

The Cavemen started off strong with a three-pointer by David Kieft (Sr). With this shot the Cavemen entered the zone they needed to be in to win. Mishawaka kept their cool throughout the game even when the Kingsmen didn't. Throughout the game attitude proved to be the key for Mishawaka because no one fouled out.

The game decider came down to the fourth quarter, and the Cavemen came through with another victory over Penn with a score of 66-63. The victories over Penn proved to be the best games of the season.

T eam unity

By Melissa Callaway

The freshmen and junior varsity teams had rocky starts this season. With losses to Wawasee, Marian, and Plymouth early in the season, it only left room for improvement.

Since both teams were young, they didn't have much game experience. In practices the coaches pushed the players during drills. They put the players in game situations to get them ready. The players thought that these situations really helped them when it came to the games. The players felt that they were more aware of what was going on in the games.

One big change from last year for the junior varsity team was the make-up of the team. This year three freshmen and seven sophomores were on the junior varsity team. Having such a young team was looked at as an advantage for one main reason - future Cavemen varsity teams. By getting junior varsity level playing experience, the players improved at a much faster rate than they would have at the freshmen level. This in turn would lead to better prepared teams for the future.

Over-all the players felt like they got the most out of the season even though their records didn't show it. The players got to know each other better on and off the court. They felt that it was a big advantage getting to know each other on the court. By knowing how the other players thought, it was easier to play as a team because they always knew what their teammates were going to do before they did it. This made for better, faster plays that helped them score more and win more games.

Shoot for two

By Melissa Callaway

The girls' varsity team came into the season with one thing on their minds - winning. The players set their minds on this at the end of the 1992-93 season. With more than half of last year's team coming back, they knew they could do it. Winning was just a step away.

The team started toward their goal with various activities. Coach Breske got the girls into the weight room as soon after the '93 season ended and all through the summer. Along with lifting weights, most of the girls played summer ball with various leagues such as AAU. The players all pushed themselves to improve for the up-coming season.

The team kicked off the season with victories over South Central, St. Joseph, and Concord. Even though the team started off with three wins, the girls still felt that they needed improvement in some areas. Jen Vining (Jr) said even though the team was winning, they still needed to work on their defensive skills.

The next game was against cross town rivals, the Penn Kingsmen. This would be the only time in regular season that the teams would meet. The game started off well, but the Cavemen ended up losing to the Kingsmen with a heart-breaking loss of 33-39.

Even though the team lost to Penn, the girls didn't let it get them down. They came back and beat LaSalle, Elkhart Memorial, Clay, and Riley. The team ended up with a nineteen and four record.

All of the team members expected to have a good season, and they did. Karla Baldini (Jr) said, "I knew we had the potential to be a really good team."

The junior varsity and freshmen girls basketball seasons started off well this year. One reason for the great start was the togetherness of the teams. Rhonda LeVeque (Jr) said, "Most of us were all good friends so it was easy for us to play as a team." Playing together paid off throughout the season for both the freshmen and junior varsity teams.

On and off the court the girls were friends. They planned activities with each other that helped bring them closer together. Jessica Campbell (Fr) said the reason the freshmen team became better friends was because they all got together one night for a party, and they all got to know each other.

By working as a team, the girls helped each other improve individual shooting skills, rebounding skills, and team spirit. If the crowd was not into the game, the girls depended on each other for support. Most of the girls said that they had wished that the attendance of the crowd would have been larger. They felt that the fans that did attend helped lift their spirits if they were losing and pumped them up even more if they were ahead.

Although the season had its ups and downs, overall it turned out almost exactly how the girls expected it to. Their one wish was that they would have gone undefeated, but that cannot always be done.

Besides having a great season all the girls became better at the sport they truly loved, basketball. They all loved the sport and it showed in the way that they played.

What if someone told you that you could lose at least five pounds in one week? Would you wonder what the catch was? What if they told you that in order to lose that weight you couldn't eat the foods that you normally did; in fact you couldn't eat at all. Then after not eating all day, you had to run for at least one hour wearing layers of shirts, shorts, and sweats. Most people would think that losing weight was not worth putting themselves through all of that hunger, pain, and sweat. Many people might not choose to live their lives that way, but to the varsity wrestling team it was a way of life. They went all day without eating, and then after school they ran and practiced hard for two and one half to three hours.

The varsity team entered the season with a hope to at least finish 11-9. Mr. Smith had told his wrestlers that this would be a rebuilding year and that the team probably would not finish as well as they had in past years. To his surprise and delight the team finished 19-1, with their only loss being to Penn.

The reason the Cavemen finished so well was because of the determination of the wrestlers. They wanted to do better than 11-9, so they set high goals for themselves and the team. Steve McClain (Fr) said, "For myself I just wanted to letter, and I won over half my matches on varsity and went to semi-state."

This young team of wrestlers proved to everyone that their abilities were not to be underestimated. They proved what they could do by taking second at sectionals, first at regionals, having seven guys in semi-state, sending two to state, and having one wrestler, Chris Snyder (Jr), win state at 152 pounds.

in the making

Five years ago a twelve year old boy walked onto a wrestling mat for the first time, never expecting he would become a state champion only five years later. In Chris Snyder's (Jr) mind only high school seniors were state champions, and he was a long way from that.

Even though Snyder never believed that he had a chance of winning state before his senior year, he still dreamed of it. For Snyder that dream started during the summer of his eighth grade year. At that time Snyder started training and pushing himself toward becoming a state champion by running and wrestling off-season. When school began, Snyder arrived early in the mornings to run and stayed late at night to run and wrestle. Snyder knew what he had to do in order to achieve his dream, and he was determined not to let anything get in his way.

As the tournament started and Snyder kept winning, he began to realize that his dream of becoming a state champion could come true. On February 19, 1994, Snyder's dream did come true - he became the first underclassman at Mishawaka High School to win a state title in wrestling.

Snyder said the final match was "hard fought down to the buzzer; I never gave up and neither did my opponent. We both wanted it; I just had a better match than he did." After the match was over, Snyder said it felt like a dream, and he was just waiting for someone to wake him up. • Melissa Callaway

S stamina

By Melissa Callaway

"Final call for 100 meter dash," echoed throughout the field. The runner walked over to his starting blocks and began to stretch out his legs. The official took his place by the starting line and announced, "Runners on your mark ... set ..." He raised his gun and fired the blank. The runners rapidly took off out of the blocks and headed toward the finish line. Each knew that the runner with the best form and the most drive would win.

Stamina, drive, and attitudes were a major part of the girls' and boys' track team this season. Even though both teams had early losses to Michigan City Elston, the team members kept positive attitudes. By keeping their attitudes up and maintaining their drive to win, both teams came back to beat Adams. The boys' team won with a score of 66-57, the girls' with a score of 69-49.

During practice the teams worked on building their stamina and endurance. Both sprinters and long distance runners did drills that improved their form thus improving their times. Although these drills were not always popular with the runners, they paid off for all of the runners. The runners' endurance, stamina, and foot speed increased by over fifty percent from the beginning of the season to the end. Most of the runners knocked seconds off their early season times.

In the end hard work paid off for two Cavemen track members, Chad Thomas (Sr) and Becky Baer (Sr). Thomas qualified for the state finals in the 110m low hurdles, and Baer in shot put. This was Baer's second year in a row participating in state - she took 6th place.

Swing away

By Toby Deal &
Melissa Callaway

At the start of the 1994 season expectations were high for this year's Cavemen baseball team. This was a team that was full of a lot of good fielders, batters and some quality pitchers.

The first game against Marian set the tone for the entire season. The Cavemen led throughout the game until the Marian Knights tied it up in the seventh. Then in extra innings Chad Cave (Sr) won the game with a towering home run over the left field wall.

This was how most of the games went for the Cavemen.

As the season continued, the team started to grow together. All of the players that did not have any varsity experience such as catcher Mike Dilley (Fr) and third baseman Jason Dragovich (So) were starting to make better decisions and play like the juniors and seniors with previous varsity experience.

The will to win was most evident in the Cavemen's final home game of the year against Penn. At the beginning of the game Penn was smashing the ball everywhere. The Cavemen were making many errors, and the score showed it, 6-0. Then the team pulled together and decided that they had to start playing better. It worked because the Cavemen came back to win the game by three runs in the final inning to stun their crosstown rival, Penn.

Through all the bad times and good times of the season such as Charlie Henry's no hitter and amazing comeback victories, the team kept their spirits high. The players kept level heads and didn't allow anyone to phase them.

Sliding into home

By Brooke Chodzinski &
Melissa Callaway

It was the bottom of the ninth. The bases were loaded. There were two outs, and a full count on the batter. The score was tied. The pitcher fired the ball across the plate. The batter swung the bat with authority and made contact with a crack of the bat. The ball flew higher and higher until it was over the wall in center field. The crowd roared as they realized that the game winning grand slam had just flown out of the park!

Pressure situations were a major part of the Cavemen junior varsity and freshmen baseball teams this season. The pressure to work as a team and play to win drove the players to work harder and practice more. Many times on cold early-spring days practices were held inside the gymnasium. Pitching, catching, and fielding were all practiced in hopes of improving enough to make the varsity team next year.

Although each player worked on improving himself personally, the entire team worked on improving itself as a whole and this was seen in the way that they played. The players worked together to make things happen. It was never just one person who took the spotlight, it was the whole team. The players had a real love for the game and it showed in their season records. The junior varsity team ended their season with twenty-three wins and four losses, the freshmen team with four wins and seven losses.

With so many talented players the varsity and junior varsity teams should be even better in the years to come.

No fear

By Melissa Callaway

With two outs, bases loaded, and a full count the girl stepped up to the plate again determined to hit the ball. She knew that if she hit the ball, she would drive in the winning run. The girl was a little nervous because the first two strikes she had swung at she didn't even touch. She stepped into the batter's box and set herself. The pitcher shook off three calls from her catcher before she agreed with one. The pitcher brought the ball back and released it. The girl at the plate swung and drove it to center field. The center fielder dropped back to catch the ball, but it was over her head. Three runs came in and the Cavemen won.

This year's varsity softball team came into the season with one main goal - to go undefeated. They believed that they could make this goal come true because of the make-up of the team. With seven seniors and seven juniors the team had all the leadership and experience they could hope for to start a season.

The team started off strong with key wins over Warsaw, Elkhart Central, and Bremen. The team was playing together and building up their confidence. The Cavemen continued their winning streak until meeting crosstown rival, Penn. The game was a hard-fought battle until the end - the 13th inning. Both teams battled back and forth answering each others hits with outs. It wasn't until the bottom of the 13th inning when the Kingsmen won with a hit to left-center field. The final score was 0-1.

In sectionals the Cavemen avenged their loss to Penn in the final game of the sectionals with a 13-3 win over the Kingsmen in six innings.

On June 6, 1994 the Cavemen made Mishawaka softball history by winning regionals. With their 1-0 win over Warsaw in the final game the Lady Cavemen took the first ever regional title for the softball team at Mishawaka.

ead to the top

By Melissa Callaway

Improvement - this was the key word for the soccer and golf teams this year. Both teams set their goals on making good use of their skills.

Attitudes and skills were the two main areas the soccer team worked on bettering. That task was made easier with the help of the team's new head coach, Romeo Berthier. Berthier, being a soccer player himself at Bethel College, knew what the guys needed to do to have a winning season. He taught the players new drills that helped with corner kicks, shooting, and controlling the ball with their bodies. He also made sure the guys' attitudes were positive all the time and made them run more to keep them in shape. Steve Gamble (Sr) said, "We usually ran seven to eight miles a day." This included running before, during, and after practice. One of the drills the players practiced was one where they went one-on-one against each other to see who could get the ball.

Over-all the new drills and attitudes paid off. The soccer team beat opponents such as Trinity and Plymouth that nearly shut them out last season.

The golf team also improved their record this season due to attitudes and hard work. During practices the players worked on putting, chipping, shooting straight, controlling their tempers, and driving. Last year the golf team suffered losses to Adams and Elkhart Central, but this year they defeated them. The golf team beat Adams with a score of 176-181 and Elkhart Central with a score of 164-166.

Over-all both teams felt good about what they accomplished this season. Each player improved their abilities. With what the guys learned this year, next year's teams should be even better.

Just Us

You've always dreamed about the day when you would be in high school. Then one morning you woke up and you were a freshman. You were terrified you wouldn't fit in. But after a while you realized you did, and high school wasn't so scary after all.

Then before you knew it, you were a sophomore, and you had your license. Now you could borrow the car and go places with your friends without mom and dad. The next thing you knew, you were a junior, and it was time to start thinking about college and taking the SAT's. You were a little scared because you had never really thought about what you wanted to do with the rest of your life. Then reality hit; it was your senior year. You had to make decisions that would affect the rest of your life, and you hoped they were the right ones.

Some days thinking about it made you want to just crawl back into bed, but you didn't because you wanted to make the best of your high school days. It has always been said that these would be the best years of your life, and you know what, they were. So you lived it up and had fun. • Melissa Callaway

I'll never forget...

My freshman year at the sports banquet. I wanted some punch and when I pushed on the button, it wouldn't stop pouring out. I filled my cup and the rest spilled on the floor.

-Rachel Rulli

My locker combination. I think it's 36-24-36, but I'm not sure.

-Kevin Cannoot

All of my friends that I have met and all of the good times we have had throughout the past four years.

-Carey Morris

When five of us went to the lake, and we decided to go out on a paddle boat. Halfway out on the lake the boat sank! We had to swim and pull the boat back at the same time.

Who is your favorite teacher and why?

Mr. Beehler. I like his cars.

-Seth Easterday

Mr. Robertson, because his style of teaching is unique. He relates his classroom work to real world. Usually when I went to a class I dreaded it; but whenever I went to his class, I always had fun and learned at the same time. Because of him I was able to decide easily what I wanted to major in at college next year.

-Sharrell Ligon

Mr. Frazier. A great teacher and awesome guy to travel through Germany with. Thanks for the memories!

-Sabrina Ellenberger

Mr. Mann, because he really knows how to get people motivated.

-Tref Edelman

Mr. Chamberlin. He's a fun guy, but yet he still teaches.

What will you miss the most about high school?

I'll miss all of my friends and the dumb things we did in high school.

-Amy DeBroka

LAI D BACK!! Juan Salamanca takes a break from studying and kicks back for a few minutes during class.

What are you afraid of after high school?

Going to college.

-Megan LaBonte

Loosing contact with all of my friends.

-Andy Hoof

Finding a job and finding my own place.

-Bobby Rayl

My ex-girlfriend going to the same college I am.

-Kevin Eller

If you found that a good friend had AIDS, would you avoid him? Why or why not?

No, because if he is my best friend, he is going to stay my best friend.

-Mike Bultinck

No, because I am educated about AIDS and know the ways to get and prevent it. I would like my friend to know that I would be there for him/her to help him/her through it.

-Becky Baer

No, they need support and understanding, not fear and rejection.

-David Bottorff

No, because love can help heal the world and ignorance can only lead to destruction.

Our Years

As graduation quickly approached, seniors began to reminisce on the four years spent at Mishawaka High School. It seemed like it was just yesterday when we stepped through the doors of this high school for the first time as freshmen. As seniors, we looked back upon all of the many happy memories that we had made.

Finding our classes for the first time, making new friends, and adjusting to high school life were just a few things we had to overcome as freshmen. All of the jokes that we once dreaded as freshmen now made us laugh with amusement. Before we knew it, though, we were sophomores. The fun times continued and the friendships grew stronger. From getting our drivers' licenses to going to football or basketball games, there was always something new and exciting. Our junior year snuck up on us, and so did many new experiences. Taking the SAT's and looking at colleges became a concern for many of us . Many also attended Prom for the very first time.

Together

Finally, we were seniors. The year that everyone had anticipated was actually here. Even though the year had been filled with a lot of fun, it had also been filled with fears and sadness. As we attended football and basketball games, we began to realize these would be the last ones we would go to as students of Mishawaka High School.

As we looked forward to graduation, all of the dreams and goals seemed so close. Though many were excited to be moving on to a different part of their lives, there were still many fears. The fear of losing touch with friends seemed to be the biggest concern to the seniors. Though we were going our separate ways, the memories and friendships that we had made over the past four years would last a lifetime.

Have you ever been humiliated in class?

I've never really been humiliated; I'm not too shy in class so things don't bother me.

Anonymous

I spontaneously combusted right in the middle of biology. Boy was that embarrassing. Bill McClain

Yes, I tripped over the trash can.

Diedri Fowler

Yes, when I was a freshman, Chris Wood pulled my chair out from under me, and I fell right on the floor.

Katy Stone

When Mr. Smith made me do push-ups for not doing homework.

Karin Gradeless

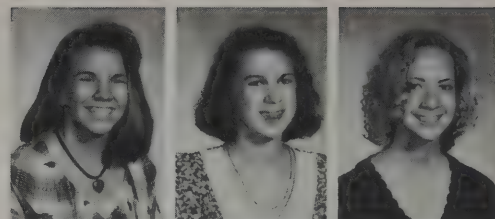

On the first day of this year, I got 6th and 7th hour mixed up. I sat in the wrong class for almost 20 minutes until I figured out it was 6th hour and not 7th hour. I compared schedule cards with someone else and felt so stupid.

What distinguishes sophomores from the rest?

We're not freshmen , but we're not upperclassmen. We're upper-lowerclassmen.

-Trinity Vena-

Strong bones and a healthy body.

-Andrew Yocum-

We're worth more than everyone else.

-Sam Mook-

We have a certain look in our eyes. That look is determination all sophomores strive for.

-Josh Hedl-

I'm a sophomore?

-Jason Lisek-

We aren't freshmen anymore!

-Landon Riggle-

That was SO funny!

If there were three flies in a kitchen, which one would be the cowboy?

The one on the range!

Andrea Lenyo

How many cute guys does it take to put in a lightbulb?

If you're in the dark with a cute guy, why bother with the lights!

Suzanne Holdeman

Knock knock.

Who's there?

Amy Fisher: BANG!

Adam Miller

Why are blond jokes so short?

So all the brunettes can remember them!

Melinda Mason

Why didn't the skeleton cross the road?

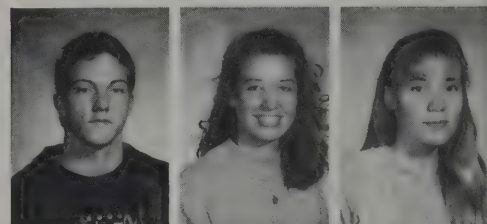

Because he didn't have the guts!

At your 10th year class reunion, you're asked, "How have you been?" You answer:

I explain how I've become the richest person in the United States.

Shane Jodway

I've been traveling around in my '65 Mercedes.

Brittney Robinson

I have become a multimillionaire and have built an empire in the Arizona desert. In 10 more years I will rule the world.

Donnie Zimmerman

I'll tell how I was recently married to a billionaire and am working as a writer.

Robin Dustin

Saving people's lives, doing a million successful surgeries, finding a cure for AIDS, you know, the usual.

Laurie Parker

I'm doing really well, but I'm still really short!

Angie Magel

FRESHMEN

If you could go any place in the entire world, where would it be, and for what reason?

Africa, because I would love to study the rainforest, its animals, and their habits.

Danelle Sliter

I would go to Bruni, because the richest man in the world lives there.

Isaiah O'Connell

To Egypt to see the pyramids. I think they are very interesting.

Heidi Amacher

Wendy's, because I might be able to get a free cheeseburger.

Dave Thomas

To the North Pole, to meet Santa Claus.

Kyle Sackowski

Mayberry, North Carolina, to meet Andy, Floyd, Opie, and Aunt Bea.

Faculty and Administration

Making a Difference

Spirit thrived under the leadership of this year's faculty and administration. Mr. Trimboli said, "The satisfaction of my job was the interaction with students and staff on a day to day basis." All through the school year the faculty and administration helped the students to excel.

Whether it be arriving early in the morning or staying late after school, the teachers were there to help their students. Some of the administration had to give up two of their Saturdays to stay with the seniors when they made up their snow days.

The faculty helped students sponsor a family during the annual food drive. During Spirit Week teachers dressed as hippies or as cowboys. In addition many teachers stayed to tutor students after school in various subjects. Others gave up some of their time to be an advisor to a club. Some faculty supported the school program that helped at risk students.

Teachers, faculty, and administrators were an integral part of Mishawaka. The school wouldn't be able to function without the help of these people. Making a difference was part of their jobs, and one that was as rewarding to teachers as it was to students.

Teacher Farewells

This was the last year at Mishawaka High School for Mr. Bottorff, a social studies teacher, and Mrs. Cunningham, an English teacher. Of the 40 years Mr. Bottorff had taught, 37 were at Mishawaka. Mrs. Cunningham taught for 30 years, 29 of them here at the high school.

Mr. Bottorff said one of the changes he noticed in his years of teaching was that more students hurt because of broken families. It effected the students' school life and work, and it also made teaching more difficult.

Both teachers said a major change was in the high school's appearance. Since the school had been remodeled, both teachers agreed it had been an especially pleasant place to work.

Mr. Bottorff had many memories of teaching at the high school. He said the funniest time he remembered was when kids were pitching pennies during a pep assembly. The vice-principal stood in front of the whole student body and told them if they were going to throw pennies, throw them now. No one did anything for a few moments, and then the entire student body threw pennies at him.

His most treasured professional memory was when he met up with a former student in a store. She told him some of the things he had said in class had saved her marriage. His most treasured personal memory was when he met his wife, who was also a teacher at the high school and still is.

Mrs. Cunningham also had many treasured memories from teaching so many years. She remembered having a student from a family who didn't have a lot of money. One year a student anonymously offered to buy clothes for someone who needed them. The boy asked her about the clothing offer after school. He wanted to get the clothes for his brother instead of himself, even though he needed the clothes as much as his brother.

When asked what her favorite novel to teach was she replied Animal Farm, and modern literature was her favorite course.

Both teachers looked back over their careers and commented on what they thought of all their years of teaching. Mr. Bottorff smiled and said, "I would do it all over again." Mrs. Cunningham replied, "The thing I will miss most is the high quality of congeniality among the staff. I shall truly miss the young people and the cooperative spirit of all the Mishawaka High School staff."

OK, LET'S SETTLE DOWN Mr. Bottorff continues to laugh after telling one of his humorous stories during Psychology class.

FOND MEMORIES Mrs. Cunningham reflects on her 29 years teaching at MHS.

Support Staff

Just Because

That's the answer you would get if you asked a MHS student why they like to shop. We as students frequented many places around town. You could find MHS students at restaurants, clothing stores, and floral shops. Though we all went to the same stores, we all had individual tastes and styles.

The ad section in the Miskodeed is a way local businesses can say thanks. When they purchased an ad, it showed that they wanted to support the community. The ad they placed will be a reminder of their support.

The ad section is also a place where parents and friends could congratulate graduating seniors. Placing an ad was a permanent reminder of how proud they were, and how much they cared. When asked why students bought senior ads for their friends, they answered, "Just Because!" • Katie Robinson

Spaghetti O~

You've been by my side for both the good times & the bad.
Shared my smiles and tears when I've been happy & sad.
Childhood days spent playing in the sun.

Over 16 years there's been so much we've done.
Memories of our friendship I will hold dear to my heart.
Time has past, changes made, & now it is time for us to part.
Going our separate ways to make a life of our own.
But never will I feel alone.

No words can clearly capture what your friendship means to me.
Unknowingly you've given me strength & inspiration that will forever be.

One thing I ask you is please keep in touch.
A friendship like ours means so much.
I wish you nothing but the best in the course you choose.
Grasp the future, hold it tight, & I know you can't lose.

Love,
Your friend

Of everything we've ever done in our lives, raising a wonderful son like you is one of the things we're proudest of.
And if we never accomplish anything else at all, we will still look at the strong, caring person you are and know that we've done something wonderful for the world.
We love you!

COLOPHON

Volume 80 of the Mishawaka High School yearbook was sponsored by the English and Journalism Department for one credit each semester. The class met one hour per day to meet this requirement.

The Miskodeed was supported through book and advertising sales and was sold as a package with the school newspaper the Alltold. The basic price for the yearbook and newspaper together was $22.00 and $25.00. Ad prices ranged from $25.00 to $175.00.

Walsworth Publishing Company based in Marceline, Missouri, lithographed the book. Valerie Tanke was the local sales representative.

Prestige Photography studio based in Indianapolis, Indiana, was the official school photographer taking all senior, underclass, group, and some candid photos. Other candid photos were taken by photo journalism students and developed by the students in the publications darkroom using Bessler enlargers and Kodak chemicals. Other color and black and white candids were processed by Moto Photo and Dill's Camera Shop.

Macintosh Aldus PageMaker 4.2 was used to create all sections in the yearbook. The Desktop designers series was also used for various layouts and graphic art.

Avant Garde and New Century Schlbk were the main type styles used throughout the book. 115 signature gloss paper was used. 806 Cranberry was the cover material with HF-807 gold writing. 850 copies were printed.

WHERE ARE YOU? Angie Giansesi (Sr) takes time out of class to call a friend who's supposedly home sick. Didn't she know that the phone was for personal phone calls only?

JUST OUR NATURE

As students sat down and prepared for finals during the last week of school, they reflected on the many events that took place throughout this past year and memories of the many sporting events that they either participated in or cheered for. The crowning of the Homecoming king and queen Jason Metcalfe and Holly Armstrong were special Friday evenings. The weekend the volleyball team went down to state, and when the wrestling state champion Chris Snyder was honored were awarding times.

Although only some students excelled on special occasions, every student excelled every day in class activities. Whether it was doing well on a pop quiz or receiving a well deserved grade on a long research paper, students were proud of their accomplishments. No matter what, students stuck their neck out to show exactly who they were. Why? Because it was simply JUST OUR NATURE! • Suzanne Siatkowski
